

The Community and Behavioral Health (CBH) certificate prepares students to be leaders in engaging communities in the public and/or private sphere. Students will take courses that will build their skills relating to program management, evaluation and assessment, and communication using a variety of methodologies. Students will receive a certificate from the Department of Public Health. Completion of certificates is not noted on academic transcripts.

Eligibility

Only matriculated Master of Public Health (MPH) students at Brigham Young University are eligible for the Community and Behavioral Health certificate.

Requirements

Students must complete 18 credits (4 classes plus field experience) in order to earn the Community and Behavioral Health certificate.

^a MPH students can count up to 10.0 credits of 300/400 level courses toward their MPH degree, but not more than 10.0 credits. Only one 300 level course may be counted. Students must petition to Graduate Studies for approval to count a 300-level course.

^b If any listed course(s) were taken as part of an undergraduate degree, then students must substitute the course(s) with another approved elective.

^c Changes to certificate course requirements must be approved by the Community & Behavioral Health certificate lead, Dr. Robbie Chaney, and MPH Director, Ali Crandall.

Field Experience and “R” Course Requirements

Students need to complete a field experience (HLTH 688R) focusing on areas related to CBH (e.g., program planning and evaluation, communication, policy, and/or project management) as approved by their graduate faculty advisor.

Students choosing to complete HLTH 603R – Special Topics in Public Health, HLTH 691R – Mentored Research, and/or HLTH 696R – Independent Studies as an elective(s) are required to focus on CBH topics, readings, research, or studies.
