The Department of Public Health invites applications for a continuing faculty status track (BYU's equivalent of tenure track) position of assistant, associate, or full professor rank. The anticipated start date is Fall Semester 2024

Required Degree and Qualifications: Applicants must have adequate preparation for a faculty position and be committed to the priorities of BYU:

- Have completed a doctoral-level degree in public health or a related field before August 2024.
- Demonstrate a capacity to develop and maintain a high-quality quantitative or qualitative independent research program for the next five years.
- Provide evidence that supports the ability to engage with entities and potential collaborators within the department, across the university, or outside of the university through research, teaching, or citizenship activities.
- Communicate a strong commitment to (1) the aims and mission of BYU; (2) fostering a community of belonging; (3) teaching and continuous teaching improvement; and (4) a student-centered approach to research and other scholarly efforts.

Duties and Expectations: Teaching responsibilities include courses in the Bachelor of Science (BS) Public Health program and in the Master of Public Health (MPH) program. Additional responsibilities include conducting and publishing high quality research, mentoring undergraduate and graduate students, and providing service to the profession, university, and community. We are seeking applicants who can meet the department's needs in the identified strategic areas and are prepared to contribute to the content areas described below.

Strategic Areas: Applicants must possess the skills, experience, or expertise necessary to teach and mentor students in at least one of the following strategic areas. Applicants should describe evidence of skills, experience, or expertise in more than one of these strategic areas if applicable:

- Health economics
- Health informatics/Digital health
- Health services research
- Health systems
- Healthcare administration
- Integration of public health and healthcare
- Policy
- Public health management
- Public health social marketing

Content Areas: Applicants must articulate how they will apply the above skills, experience, or expertise to strengthen the department's ability to address one or more of the following content areas:

- Poverty alleviation and health
- Climate change and health
- Environmental health with an emphasis on water, sanitation, and hygiene (WASH)
- Healthcare
- Infectious disease and control
- Mental health and wellbeing
- Public health ethics and leadership
- Sexual/reproductive health
- Substance use or addictive behaviors
- Other content areas that represent critical or emerging public health challenges

Instructions to Applicants: Application materials must be submitted online at https://yjobs.byu.edu by Thursday, February 1, 2024. Required application materials include application, cover letter, curriculum vitae, and a personal statement addressing the required qualifications and duties and expectations outlined above, including strategic areas and content areas. Within the application, you will be invited to provide contact information for three recommenders. They will be contacted to submit a letter of recommendation electronically during the application process.

Applications Due: Thursday, February 1, 2024
Apply Online: https://yjobs.byu.edu
Position Title: Public Health CFS Professorial
Job Opening ID: 128878

Mission Alignment: BYU is committed to hiring faculty members who enthusiastically embrace and energetically advance its unique mission. To this end, please include a one-page mission alignment statement as part of your application that addresses how you might, as a BYU faculty member: (1) live a life of loyalty to Jesus Christ and His restored Church and align yourself with doctrines and teachings declared by living prophets, seers, and revelators; (2) demonstrate intentionality in building faith in Jesus Christ and testimony of His restored gospel among students and others in the BYU community; and (3) teach your subject matter with the Spirit of God and strive to keep it “bathed in the light and color of the restored gospel” (Spencer W. Kimball).

Diversity and Belonging: Our department affirms that all human beings are children of God. We value the richness and strength that a variety of individual characteristics, life experiences and circumstances, perspectives, talents, and gifts bring to our community. We therefore encourage individuals of diverse backgrounds to apply.

Additional Information: The Department of Public Health is housed within the College of Life Sciences. A Bachelor of Science (BS) Public Health undergraduate degree program with four emphasis areas (health science, epidemiology, health promotion, environmental/occupational health) as well as an MPH program are offered by the department. The department is composed of 20 full-time faculty members. For further information about the department, see https://ph.byu.edu.

Brigham Young University requires all faculty to observe the university’s honor code and dress and grooming standards. Preference is given to qualified candidates who are members in good standing of the affiliated church, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The salary is competitive and commensurate with experience.

Equal Opportunity Employer: m/f/Vets/Disability