Project Description
The Utah Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) is one of CDC’s ten Foodborne Diseases Centers for Outbreak Response Enhancement (FoodCORE). The FoodCORE centers work together to develop new and better methods to detect, investigate, respond to, and control multistate outbreaks of foodborne diseases. One of the objectives of the FoodCORE project is to improve investigation and interviewing of Salmonella, E. coli, and Listeria cases.

DHHS is currently recruiting an Enteric Disease Intern (EDI) to assist with the FoodCORE project. The EDI will build knowledge of enteric diseases and their impact, learn the art and science of case interviewing, participate in outbreak investigations and after-action activities, become familiar with investigative tools and DHHS’s communicable disease surveillance system, and acquire hands-on epidemiology experience.

Responsibilities:
1. Perform enteric disease interviews
2. Assist with investigative response during foodborne disease outbreaks
3. Assist with other enteric disease projects and reports as needed

Prerequisites
Required: Current student, great interpersonal skills, knowledge of Microsoft Word and Excel, highly motivated, independent worker
Preferred: Graduate-level student, Spanish-speaking, experience conducting interviews

Company Description
Lasa Health is a women’s health company supporting patients with chronic pelvic pain and endometriosis. Their mobile app provides evidence-based resources to support patients who are struggling with symptoms. Founder and CEO, Margaret Melville (BYU ’17 alumni) visited 25 doctors before finally getting diagnosed with endometriosis.

Internship #1: Social Media Intern
The social media intern will be responsible for creating daily posts on the company Instagram account. The goal of these posts are to 1) raise awareness for pelvic pain and endometriosis, 2) provide useful educational resources, 3) foster a sense of community and support, and 4) highlight new research or breakthroughs in women’s health. The ideal candidate will have experience creating social media posts in Instagram, generating engaging captions, citing relevant peer-reviewed journals, and making learning about health fun!

Internship #2: Data Analysis Intern
The data analysis intern will support efforts to measure the impact of Lasa Health’s platform. Patients regularly report their symptoms on the Lasa Health app and complete regular assessments of their Health-Related Quality of Life (HRQoL) and other relevant metrics. The ideal candidate will have basic statistical analysis skills and have an interest in turning data into insights! This intern also has an opportunity to be a co-author if the analysis is turned into a white paper or case study.

Application Instructions
Send a resume to margaret@lasahealth.com. Please include the following information:

- Which internship(s) are you interested in and why?
- What is your desired start date?
- How many total hours does your internship need to be?
- How many hours per week are you available?
